

shop caters to smaller shoppers and has hundreds of items to choose from.

The shop offers children's clothing and novelties. You can pick up something for a future Louisiana State University tiger or Saints player. No matter if you have a princess, ballerina, diva or little man, you're sure to find something there.

Boujo (701 No. 2A110) offers trinkets, novelties and treasures. There you can find hundreds of different items to brighten up your day. The shop offers shoes, luggage, a line of colorful bags and items from Vera Bradley, Jazz candles, Merle Norman make-up and much more. "I love girlie things," says owner Angel Bougon.

FeBe

Boujo also offers two distinct jewelry lines, Khamilia and Kameleon. Khamilia is the only interchangeable line that includes pieces licensed by Disney, and Kameleon is a line with interchangeable jewelpops.

Sue's Jewelry (3122 Metairie Road) is a full service jeweler that caters to people who love to show that they love Louisiana. Pieces with local emblems such as Fleurs-de-lis, "NOLA", LSU and Saints logos are prominently displayed in cases for all to see. The shop also offers a variety of fine jewelry including engagement rings and a large selection of children's pieces.

If "I dos" are on your mind this fall, drop into Hiller Jewelry (923) to check out their selection of diamond engagement rings that Lisa Biderman, the great-granddaughter of the store's founder, says are the store's staples.

The store is also moving in a new direction since its move from Veterans Boulevard. Owner Joe Biderman says, "The store is now set up for us to be like your personal shoppers."

Hiller is also adding more casual pieces to its selection. You can find bangles, casual necklaces and the highly sought-after Alexis Bittar line.

If a special occasion is what you're shopping for, then Boudreaux's (701) is where you'll want to visit. "Even though the economy is a little soft right now, customers are still coming in to purchase pieces for special occasions such as engagements, anniversaries and birthdays," says owner Brian Boudreaux.